Just take a walk on any of our beaches after a storm - The tide line is nothing but plastics in various stages of degradation. Look at the shore break after a storm. Whole waves are made up of micro-plastics. Creatures not only get caught in it and die slowly, but they eat it, thinking they've had a meal, and starve to death. No more excuses. No more plastic bags! We need to move away from this material where there are other viable options. It's the right thing to do.
